Tip of the Month:

Read about it! Talk about it! Think about it!
Building understanding while reading is the ultimate goal. Here are some tips to offer some fun ways to build a confident reader.

- Let your child pick out their own books at the library to help them gain interest.
- Introduce them to a series of books that makes them want to read another one!
- Teach your child tricks to help with comprehension. Have them summarize in a few sentences or make predictions of what will happen next. These strategies will help students comprehend and remember what they read.

Book Recommendation of the Month:

Primary Recommendation:
Thanks for Thanksgiving, by Julie Markes, is a great rhyming book for children to learn about the importance of Thanksgiving. With its brightly colored pictures and vivid details, this book introduces it in such a way to make even the youngest readers engaged!

This month is a big month for our students. The first trimester is coming to an end and report cards will be coming in December. Students will be working hard to finish their current reading units. We look forward to some excitement in December as we will begin our Race to Recommend challenge (more information will be coming soon). We hope you are all staying warm and cozy with a great book.
